DECEMBER 2018

The next park we will visit, as we read our way across America, is Isle Royal National Park in Michigan. This park, which was established in 1940, is not as well-known as some of the other parks we have visited. It can only be reached by boat or sea-plane, because it is located in the world's largest freshwater lake, Lake Superior! Isle Royal is a great place for fishing, boating and hiking. Many kinds of wildlife call this park home. There are beavers, mink, muskrat, foxes, snowshoe hares, moose, wolves, and more than 200 different kinds of birds. Native Americans once mined copper by pounding the rock with stones. Fur traders, lumbermen and fishermen have also worked in Isle Royal before it became a National Park. French explorers came through in the
